Definitions according to the Office for National Statistics

Economic activity describes a person's main activity the week before the 2011 Census. People can be divided into two main economic activity categories; 'economically active' and 'economically inactive':

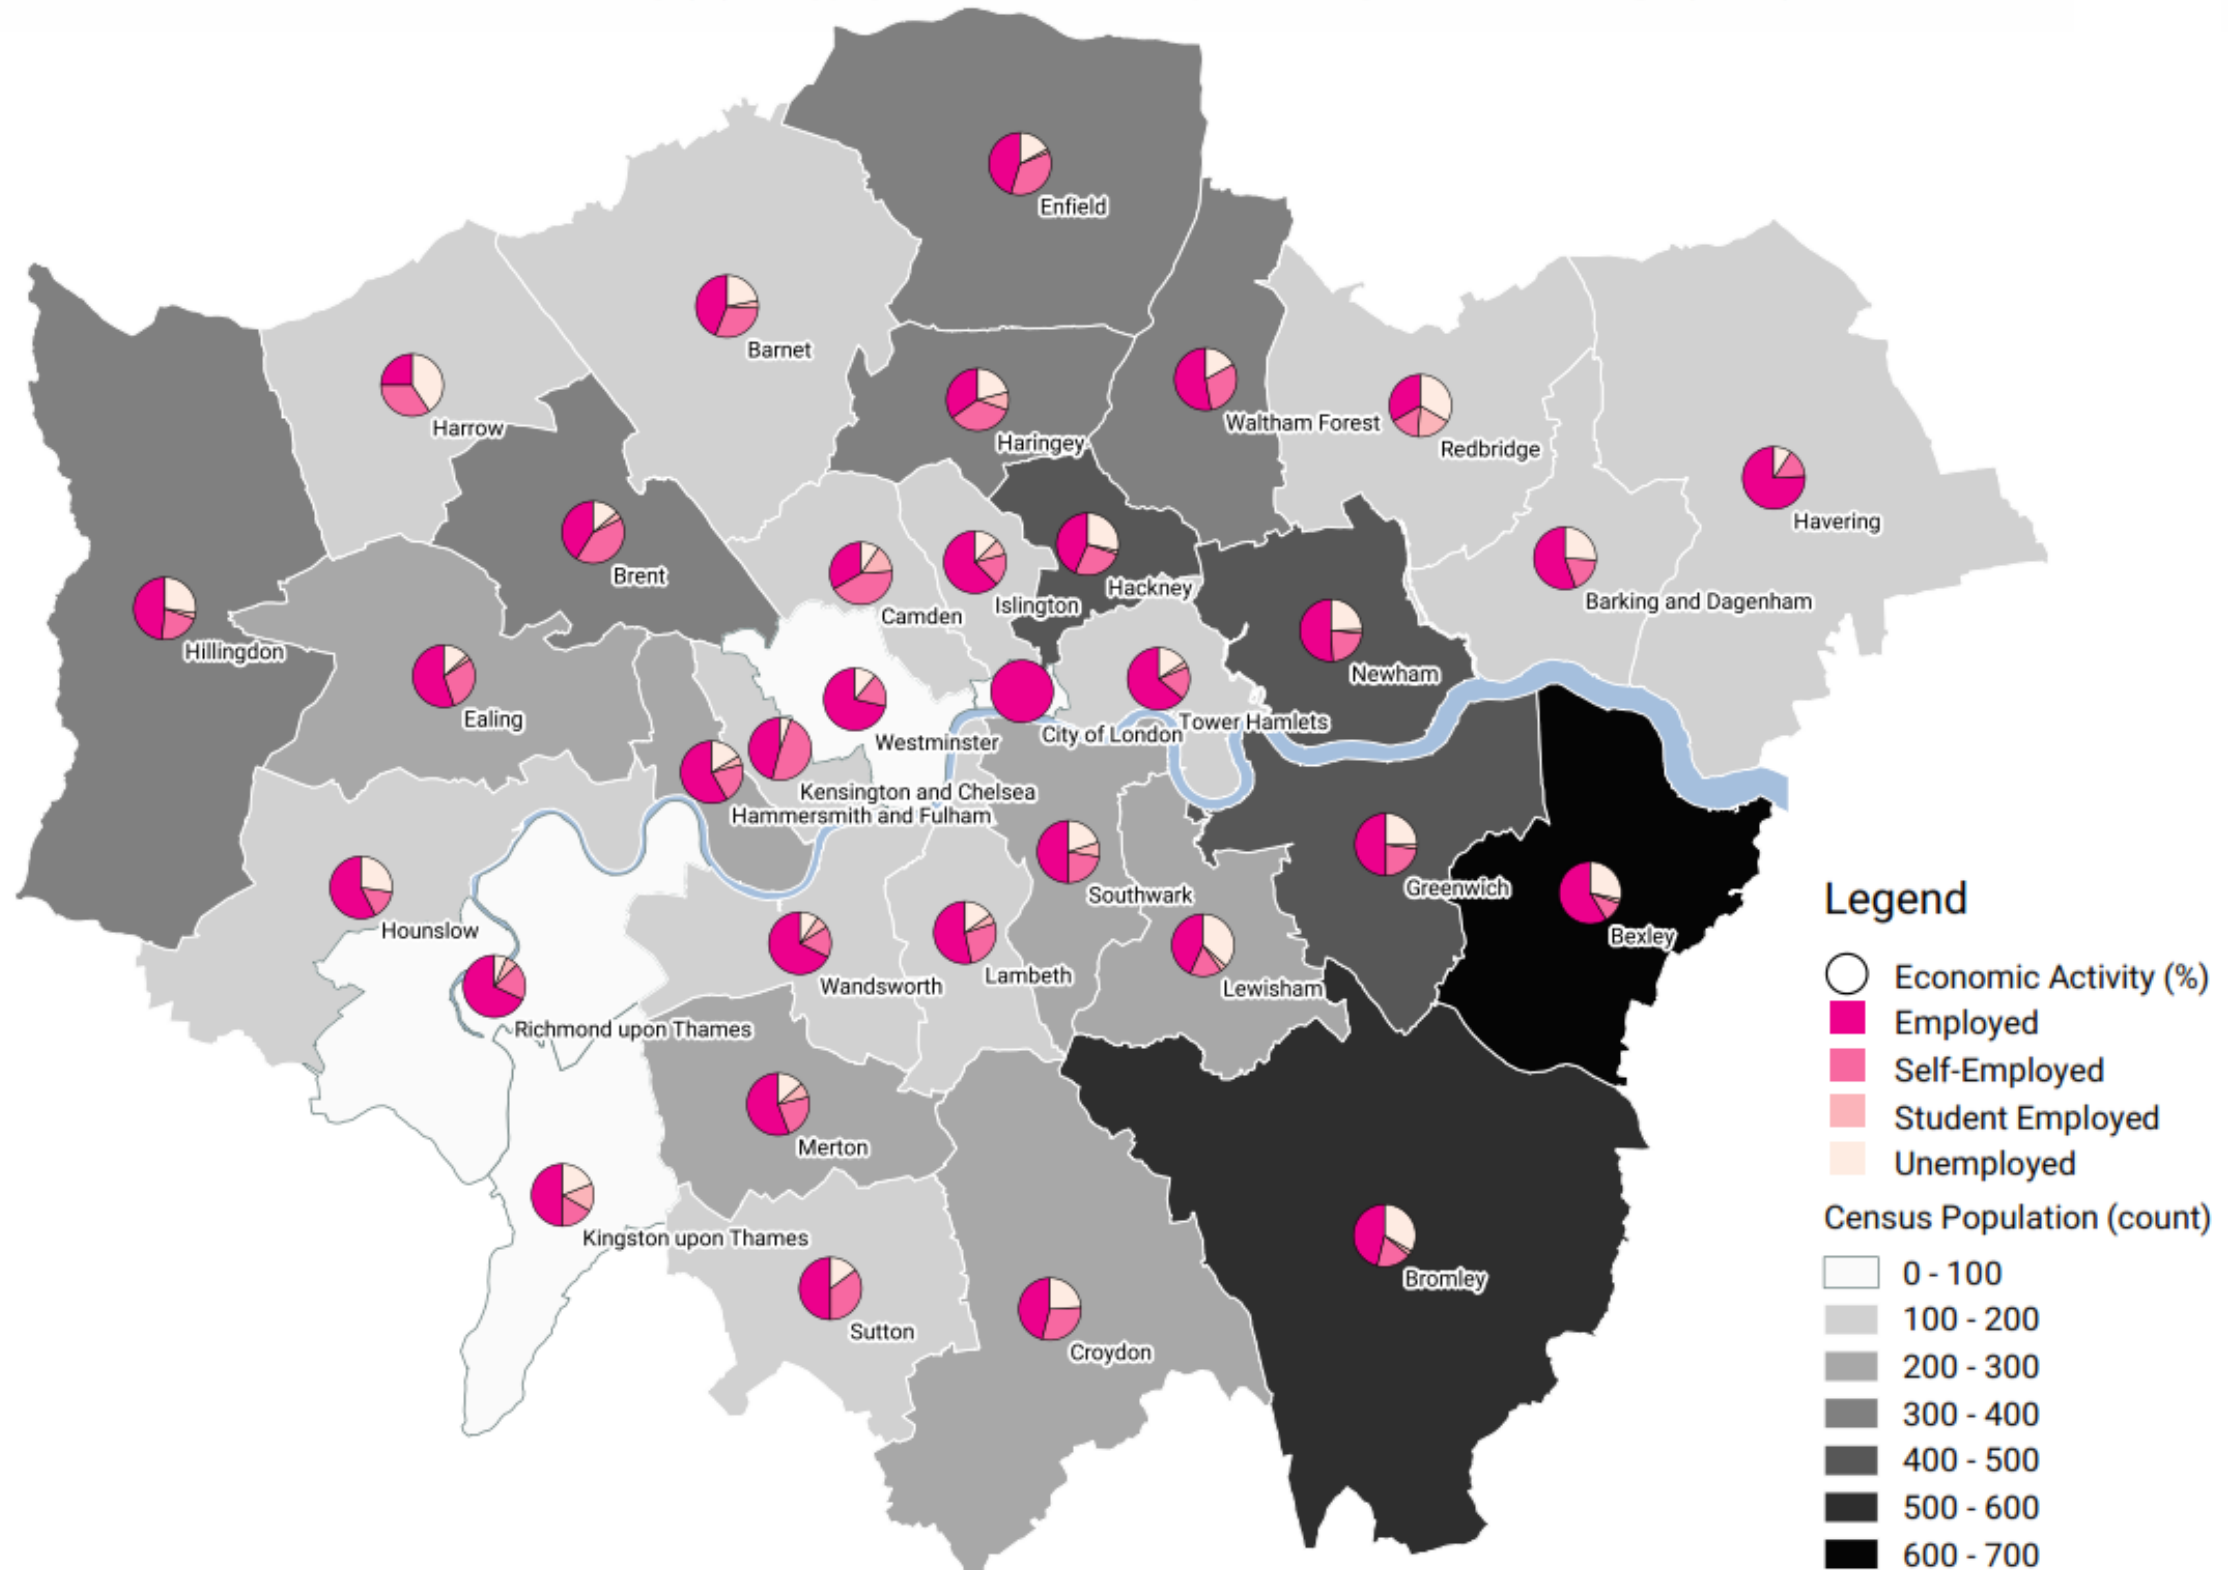

- a. 'Economically active' covers those who were in full- or part-time employment and those not in employment but actively seeking and available for work (unemployed).
- b. 'Economically inactive' covers those who were not in employment or actively seeking and available for work, due to being retired, looking after home or family, long-term sick or disabled, students or other reasons.
